Market Overview

The PRU Monthly Income Plan Class A and Class M were up by 0.3% (bid-to-bid basis) and 0.4% (bid-to-bid basis) respectively versus its benchmark which gained 0.04%. Over the month, US corporate bond and the US Dollar Asian corporate bond markets continued to perform well in Singapore dollar terms. This allowed the Fund to register positive returns in February.

High yield bonds delivered positive total returns for the twelfth consecutive month in February, despite increased volatility. The month began with headline risks causing risk aversion, poor primary market conditions, and high yield outflows, but ended on a positive note with recovering prices and better new issue conditions. The most notable catalysts for the month were headlines about Greece and other European countries' fiscal challenges as well as heightened rhetoric from Washington and policy tightening in China.

Elsewhere, Asian credit markets turned in modest returns in February. The markets underwent corrections in the first half of the month on concerns over global monetary tightening and sovereign credit risk fears. Nevertheless, the worries abated later and the markets bounced back.

The fund manager continues to take a more cautious view by maintaining a slightly lower allocation to US high yield bonds versus US Dollar Asian bonds. Current credit spreads probably provide sufficient but no longer exceptional compensation for expected defaults, based on historical experience. Credit markets are now normalised, and going forward, are unlikely to offer investors the strong double-digit annual return as seen before. All the US dollar credit investment continues to be fully currency hedged to Singapore dollar.
