Market Overview

The PRU Monthly Income Plan Class A and Class M were down by 2.1% (bid-to-bid basis) and 2.2% (bid-to-bid basis) respectively versus its benchmark's neutral return. Mounting investor concerns over the European sovereign debt crisis and its contagion effect on global asset markets as well as bank liquidity triggered a global equity markets sell-off in May. Investors reduced exposures to risky assets including corporate bonds. As such, the USD credit markets suffered negative returns in May.

In the month of May, the nearly 15 month-long trends of positive monthly returns in high yield were broken, as a strong wave of risk aversion hit the global capital markets. Among the most prominent issues that collectively contributed to a sell-off across risk asset classes were European sovereign debt levels, the potential implications on global growth following the implementation of austerity measures, as well as financial regulatory reform. Signs of slower Chinese growth, concerns regarding the Korean peninsula, and one of the worst oil spills in US history also hurt sentiment. Elsewhere, performance of Asian local bond markets was broadly mixed.

The fund manager continues to take a more cautious view by maintaining a slightly lower allocation to US high yield bonds versus US Dollar Asian bonds. Current credit spreads probably provide sufficient but no longer exceptional compensation for expected defaults, based on historical experience. Credit markets are now normalised, and going forward are unlikely to offer investors the strong double-digit annual return as seen before. All the US dollar credit investment continues to be fully currency hedged to Singapore dollar.
