

Daily Bulletin

August 20, 2014

- Asian stocks rose broadly on Tuesday, with sentiment boosted by better-than-expected U.S. housing data and easing concerns over global conflicts from Ukraine to Gaza and Iraq. Encouraging corporate earnings from the region and expectations for a continuation of ultra-loose monetary policy also helped underpin investors' risk appetite.
- U.S. stocks turned in another strong performance during trading on Tuesday, extending the upward trend seen over the past several sessions. The gains on the day once again lifted the tech-heavy Nasdaq to a new fourteen-year closing high.
- European stocks continued to rally Tuesday amid easing concerns about Ukraine and hopes the Bank of England will hold off on a widely-anticipated rate hike.
- After failing to sustain an early upward move, U.S. treasuries showed a notable downturn before ending Tuesday's trading modestly lower.
