

Daily Bulletin October 21, 2014

- Asian stocks rose Monday as dovish talk from central bankers eased worries about the global economy and the timing of Federal Reserve Board interest rate rises.
- U.S. stocks ended higher Monday on investor hopes for a strong earnings season. Reports from Halliburton, Gannett Co. and others helped ease worries over global economic growth, but disappointing results from IBM limited the market's gains.
- European stocks fell Monday on concern the euro zone is heading into deflation. A profit warning by German business software maker SAP hit technology shares. And German September producer prices declined faster than expected.
- U.S. Treasuries edged higher Monday after losing ground in the two previous trading sessions. Trading was subdued amid lingering concerns about the global economic outlook.
